Criminals prefer easy targets

We never think crime will happen to us—until it does. By making yourself more difficult to prey upon, you lessen the risk of criminal attack. That means having a personal safety strategy in place before you need it, having the knowledge and skills to help keep you safe. Essentially, you're trying to check the "opt out" box during the criminal selection process.

Don't be an easy target

Having a personal safety strategy in place and knowing the techniques and tactics you can use to avoid becoming an easy victim can help you live smarter and be safer. We can all pinpoint times where we've made ourselves an easy target—whether it was having our heads buried in our phones, parking in a dimly lit area at night, or leaving our house or car unlocked. But there are many other, less obvious situations that make us vulnerable as well.
